

COMPREENDER

Pandemic-induced consumer trends are here to stay (part 2)

“With back-to-school this year, [...] it is evidence that we’re starting to emerge, and that has an impact on what we eat and where we eat. We might be going to some quick-service restaurants a little bit more often. We’re not all holed up in our homes as much as we used to be,” said Darren Seifer, food and beverage industry analyst at The NPD Group, Inc., during a conference in September.

LER MAIS

Brazil: soon a tomato molecule to treat bad cholesterol

Brazil startup developed a platform for the treatment of chronic diseases.

LER MAIS

